We are pleased to invite submissions to the 3rd edition of the Welfare & Policy Conference organized by the Society for Research on Welfare and Policy, the research program HOPE & the Bordeaux School of Economics.

Our societies are facing unprecedented political, climatic, demographic and technological challenges. Understanding these transformations, and designing policies that promote well-being, equity and resilience, requires rigorous evidence from economics and the social sciences. The Welfare & Policy Conference welcomes contributions that advance our understanding of behavior, well-being, inequality and public policy. We invite theoretical, empirical and methodological papers from economics and quantitative social sciences, particularly (but not exclusively) on the following topics: Labor markets, family policies and nonmarket time; Health, mental health, care and human development; Poverty, inequality and social mobility; Tax-benefit systems, social insurance and the welfare state; Normative contributions to policy evaluation and welfare analysis; Behavioral responses to political, climatic and technological shocks; Trust, beliefs, emotions, social norms and political behavior; Social media, misinformation, AI and democratic resilience; Climate change, adaptation and environmental behavior; Migration, demographic change and social cohesion;.
